College Recovery Service

No-one in the sector knows more about recovering colleges in difficulty than Bill Grady and Trevor Jameson. In a six month project, they will lead on securing and strengthening the college business, ensuring sustainable quality improvement.

Building success

- Colleges in recovery, in persistent Category 'C' status or in decline in terms of enrolments will be brought swiftly into line with national benchmarks.
- Demoralised managers will be fired up with ambition and enthusiasm to succeed on behalf of their learners.
- Firm foundations will be laid for a new incoming Principal to build on.

We're delighted to be able to offer colleges in need the services of the sector's top experts.

Bill Grady OBE

Bill was already a successful Principal when he took on the seemingly intractable problem of The Isle of Wight College, achieving a dramatic turnaround in its fortunes and in the quality of its service to students. He left it financially secure and successful in inspection. Next, he turned around the weak performance of NESOCOT in Epsom, preparing it in six months for the new Principal to drive it forward, before achieving the same success in Plymouth College of FE in the same time period.

Trevor Jameson

After a successful period as Principal at Hull College (157 Group College), Trevor has turned his considerable skills to the recovery of colleges in significant difficulty, including his leadership of the high-profile recovery of Keighley College.
