Professional advice

While it is true that an organisation's employees are their most important resource, they are also the most volatile. Colleges should be sure that their policies meet the requirements of their organisation and of the law. Professional advice on issues concerning human resources policy and legislation ensure good practice, which in the long term is invaluable in helping to meet business needs.

Impartiality

We can provide advice on restructuring within colleges - this can range from small issues through to major restructuring and department reviews. The advantages of having an impartial outsider conducting this type of activity and recommending changes are immense.

"Simon was asked to support the college in a particularly difficult grievance case. He quickly grasped hold of the issues and provided an excellent service which was very knowledgeable, supportive, robust and professional." Isle of Wight College

Simon Graham (Senior HR Consultant)

Simon has experience as a college HR Director, as Deputy Director at the AoC and as Director of his own successful consultancy company serving the college sector. He has provided short- and long-term support to a large number of colleges and has legal and other specialist expertise available to him.
